Harvest:

Vintage 2015 began with strong downpours in the autumn, which finished just before the harvest. Since then the winter was very mild and extremely dry. Only a snowfall in February helped cleanse the vineyards. The beginning of spring was cool, especially at night and at the beginning of May temperatures rose to extremes never seen before (one or two degrees higher than previously recorded) the heat continued during June and July, accompanied by drought although there was some rain well distributed. The last rain was before the harvest in mid-June. The temperatures returned to normal in August which improved the quality of the maturation of the grapes and, along with a new rain falling in late August, made the grapes ripen optimally.
